THE ORCHARDS GROUP FORMS
TEAM TO WALK IN ATLANTA'S
3-DAY FOR THE CURE.

See inside cover for details.

LETTER FROM THE EDITOR

The year 2011 is off to a great start! I hope everyone had a wonderful New Year's Eve. My family is back into the swing of things and our normal routine. Spring is just around the corner, and again our schedule will become hectic and jammed packed between work, school, baseball, gymnastics and softball.

This month, Isabelle turns 8, and she is so excited. For her birthday she is getting her room redone. Gone are the days of princesses, and she is ready for a big girl room! Brad will be taking the kids away for the weekend while three girlfriends and I transform Isabelle's room. She knows it is happening and chose the color, but everything else is a surprise! I hope she loves it!

All of our properties continue to be successful, and the homeowners keep busy with all of their various social engagements. Now that the holidays are over, our meet and greets will continue every month and we hope to see a lot of new faces!

I look forward to hearing about any travels you and your neighbors may have done together over the holidays.

As Always, Happy Reading!

About Anxiety Disorders

If you have an anxiety disorder, worry or fear becomes long-term and may get worse instead of better as time goes on. Doctors and older adults tend to view anxiety and fear as normal given the circumstances of aging. But developing an anxiety disorder late in life is not a normal part of aging.

Anxiety caused by stressful events like moving or losing a job is a normal part of life. But anxiety disorders are different. An anxiety disorder lasts a long time and can get worse if it is not treated.

Anxiety disorders commonly occur at the same time as other illnesses. In older adults, anxiety disorders often occur at the same time as depression, heart disease, diabetes and other medical problems. In some cases, these other illnesses need to be treated before a person will respond to treatment for the anxiety disorder.

There are several basic types of anxiety disorders. Although they share some characteristics, each is slightly different and may respond to different treatments. Different anxiety disorders include generalized anxiety disorder, social phobia, panic disorder, post-traumatic stress disorder, obsessive compulsive disorder, and specific phobias.

In generalized anxiety disorder (GAD), a person becomes very worried about things like health, money, and family problems, even if everything is OK. A person may be very anxious about just getting through the day.

In social phobia, a person fears being judged by others or of being embarrassed. This fear can get in the way of doing everyday things such as going to work, running errands, or meeting with friends. People who have social phobia often know that they shouldn't be so afraid, but they can't control their fear.

In panic disorder, a person has sudden, unexplained attacks of terror, and often feels his or her heart pounding. During a panic attack, a person feels a sense of unreality, a fear of impending doom, or a fear of losing control. Panic attacks can occur at any time.

Post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) develops after undergoing a terrifying ordeal like an accident or an act of violence. A person who develops PTSD may have been the one who was harmed, or have a loved one who was harmed or have witnessed a harmful event.

People with obsessive-compulsive disorder (OCD) feel the uncontrollable need to check things over and over, or they may have certain thoughts or perform certain routines over and over. The thoughts and rituals of OCD cause distress and get in the way of daily life.

A specific phobia is an intense, extreme fear of something that poses little or no actual danger. Some of the more common specific phobias involve closed-in places, heights, escalators, tunnels, highway driving, water, flying, dogs, and the sight of blood.

All Roads Lead to Snow Mountain

Plan a Visit to Snow Mountain at Stone Mountain Park

After January's historic wintery mess, snow may be the last weather feature you want to think about. But we promise, this time it will be fun!

Atlanta's Stone Mountain Park transforms into a winter wonderland through March 6. Come early and make a day of it. With three football fields of deep, fresh snow, Snow Mountain has plenty for your whole family to do!

In acres of real snow, there's a family tube ride called Avalanche Alley plus 20 slides and lots of winter games. Little Angels is a special area reserved for young children under age 3.

PLAN YOUR VISIT

To enjoy Snow Mountain, make reservations and buy tickets in advance. Here's the Web site to tell you hours of operation and how to make your purchase. http://www.snowmountainpark.com/tickets_reservations/

Tickets: $27 for ages 3 and older. Tickets include a two-hour tubing session plus access to the snow play areas. Combo tickets are available for access to other attractions.

Parking: One-day parking: $10 per vehicle

What to Wear: You'll be playing in real snow! Wear warm, water-resistant clothes including gloves and boots. You might also consider covering ears with muffs or hats. Layering is also recommended. You might start out cold but end up breaking a sweat as you play in the snow. Also consider bringing a change of clothing. The snow park offers locker rentals.

The Orchards of Roswell made merry at the annual December get together. They had a great turnout and a wonderful time.

Despite snow flurries and a cold wind, homeowners at The Orchards of Duluth were joyful at their holiday party, which featured a catered dinner and Christmas carols.
